the way
we see it . . .

Summit talks, the Winter Olympics at Squaw Valley, Khrushchev's visit, the presidential campaign, the census—to many people these were the highlights of 1960. But at Cairo High, we looked at the year from a different angle—from the viewpoint of lively teen-agers. We remember much more vividly our top level talks about dominant genes as factors in heredity or the immortality of beauty—our exciting games at the Mounds City Tournament—our important visitors, the State Inspectors—our elections for Sweetheart King and Queen—our polls to discover the latest steadies. Looking back over that wonderful year, this is . . .

The way we see it . . .

In many ways 1960 was a unique year, but we spent our leisure time having fun in the usual ways.

Lighted gym windows proclaimed a "rock and roll" sock hop . . . bermudas and slacks announced play practice. Groups met at Teen-Town for ping-pong, laughter, and fellowship. Fishing at Horseshoe Lake, boating and skiing on the river, games of basketball in someone's back yard, or "horsin'" around the school campus, gave us a needed break from the fast pace of classroom activities. Wherever we went, whether walking to school, sitting in Mac's, or taking a "Sunday" drive, we saw teen-agers who were glad to be teen-agers.

Growing up, facing responsibility, becoming more independent—these were the lessons we learned from our working hours. Local businessmen hired CHS students and found that we made good employees—filling gas tanks, carrying groceries, delivering flowers, serving ice cream, or waiting on customers in stores and restaurants.

In 1960, Cairo was a great place for learning. Students covered the town—studying at the library, interviewing government officials, touring Magnolia Manor, participating in Scouting, attending religious services, collecting for the Red Cross.

Through these activities we became part of our community—a helpful and energetic part. And we were a well-prepared part, too, because of our training at Cairo High

ADMINISTRATION PLANS PROGRAM FOR 1960

Our Cairo Public School System functions efficiently under the direction of our capable Superintendent of Schools, Mr. Leo C. Schultz, and his secretary, Mrs. Landon.

Handling school affairs isn't an easy job, and "Prof" works closely with our Board of Education and its president, Mr. Edgar Stephens. The Board's many areas of supervision require its division into eight committees—Building and Grounds, Discipline and Regulations, Finance, Health, Insurance, Purchasing, Teachers and Textbooks, and Visitation of the Schools.

We feel fortunate in having such a capable superintendent and Board of Education.

OUR SUPERINTENDENT, Mr. Leo C. Schultz, and his secretary, Mrs. Robert Landon, are pleased with the grant from the National Defense Act.

OUR PRINCIPAL IS HONORED BY NATIONAL ASSOCIATION

Cairo High is proud of its principal, Mr. Harold Mescher. He is recognized as a leading educator not only in the Southern Illinois area, but throughout the State. We shared the thrill when he was invited to take part in a panel discussion at the convention of the National Association of Secondary School Principals, held in Portland, Oregon, late in February. The afternoon before he left the student body assembled to wish him "happy landings." And when we all sang For He's a Jolly Good Fellow, we meant it.

Carnation Day identified our most popular "sweetheart"—Miss Harris, secretary to Mr. Mescher. She sported more floral valentines than anyone else, because this was one way for us to say "thanks" for all the extras she does for us every day.

WE WRITE THEMES, PAINT POSTERS, TAPE FRENCH

Looking back through the year, we think first of our classes. Communication heads the list of skills to be mastered. Thus we all took four years of English, and many elected foreign languages and art.

In English we studied writing—working on sentences, paragraphs, themes, and finally research papers. Selections such as Eliot's Silas Marner, Whitman's Lilacs, and Saki's Laura not only provided hours of enjoyment, but also taught us to appreciate good literature.

French emphasized conversational understanding of the language. The record player and tape recorder helped students learn vocabulary and pronunciation: daily chats, songs, and skits gave them a chance to use what they had learned. Latin students plowed through Jason's voyages and Caesar's works, striving for accurate translations.

Artists expressed themselves through sculpture, drawings, and sketches. Poppy posters and Christmas cards pictured definite ideas; more abstract works conveyed feelings.

PLAY HARD, LEARN SKILLS, COMPLETE PROJECTS

Machine shop, woodworking, mechanical drawing, and physical education require both physical and mental alertness.

Shop students are taught the skill of using their hands, tools, and machines to create beauty in woods, metals, and leather. The whirl of lathes, the grate of sandpaper, and the smell of wood shavings all show the interests of teenage boys—to be used later either as master workmen or “do-it-yourself” husbands.

Physical education students remember skill tests in balance and strength . . . exciting basketball tournaments . . . games of kick ball . . . and the fun and horseplay in the locker rooms.

Exacting work in these courses produce satisfaction in the finished product, whether it be a mahogany dresser, a driftwood lamp, an isometric drawing, or a healthy body.

GOVERNMENT REQUIRES PREPARATION—IN SCHOOL AND OUT

Social studies are an important part of every student's curriculum. Through courses in world history, American problems, students trace government from the earliest times to the present. By studying difficulties of the past, they begin to understand the problems of today and how they may be solved. Drawing maps, compiling notebooks, and interviewing city officials help make governments of the past and present come alive to C.H.S. students.

A great aid to all classes is our well-stocked library of references, atlases, current magazines, and daily newspapers. With the help of Mr. Pigg and his staff of efficient librarians, sufficient information on almost any topic can be easily located.

PRACTICAL COURSES

Practical courses attracted many students. Even in a highly specialized world, typing a letter, preparing a meal, and driving a car are always necessary.

In the business education department, well trained secretaries were "a making." Typists were busy learning the many forms of correspondence, striving to reach greater speeds, and struggling with complicated filing assignments. Stenographers took dictation with progressive speed and accuracy. Bookkeepers formulated payrolls, recorded profits and losses and balanced accounts (the hard way).

Down on first floor, home ec students developed the skills of homemaking: planning tasty and well-balanced menus, formulating protein-enriched diets, and preparing economical grocery budgets. Along with learning the simple techniques of sewing, the girls studied the basic color scheme, experimented with the different fabrics, and designed their own fashions. Later these were modeled in a spring style show.

Another practical course, drivers' ed, was a beneficial one-semester course. Students learned the state traffic laws, basic mechanics of a car, and the correct procedures of driving. During severe winter weather students drove on icy and snowy streets—a real test for the "good" driver.

Mathematics

Following the trend throughout the country, a large percentage of upper classmen elected science and mathematics courses. In biology we studied the germination of corn and beans, bacteria, fungi, genetics, and human anatomy. Especially interesting was the demonstration of the daily development and photography of the chicken embryo. Each year at Cairo High chemistry and physics are alternated, this being physics year. Students found turning on a light, opening a door, and driving to school are all based on scientific principles of physics.

Math is essential to science just as it is to many other subjects. In Algebra I students learned to examine critically and state conclusions clearly. Plane and solid geometry presented formal proof involving relationship and measurement of lines, angles, and areas, while trig covered the solution of triangles, complex numbers, and theory of equations.

Cairo High offers an interesting and well-rounded curriculum. Although Dr. Conant frowns upon the small high school, nevertheless C.H.S. graduates are well prepared for college and the business world.

IN SPORTS

Enthusiastic fans followed the Pilots through the 1959-60 year in athletics. The teams were sometimes disappointed, but Pilot supporters cheered hard for the boys who played their hearts out for their coach, their team, and their school. Long after the scores of these games are forgotten, we will recall exciting kickoffs

. . . charging lines of the Big Blue . . . tension and heat of a crowded gym . . . thrilling double plays . . . sliding home for that winning run . . . flailing legs over the cross-bar . . . pounding feet along the cinder path.

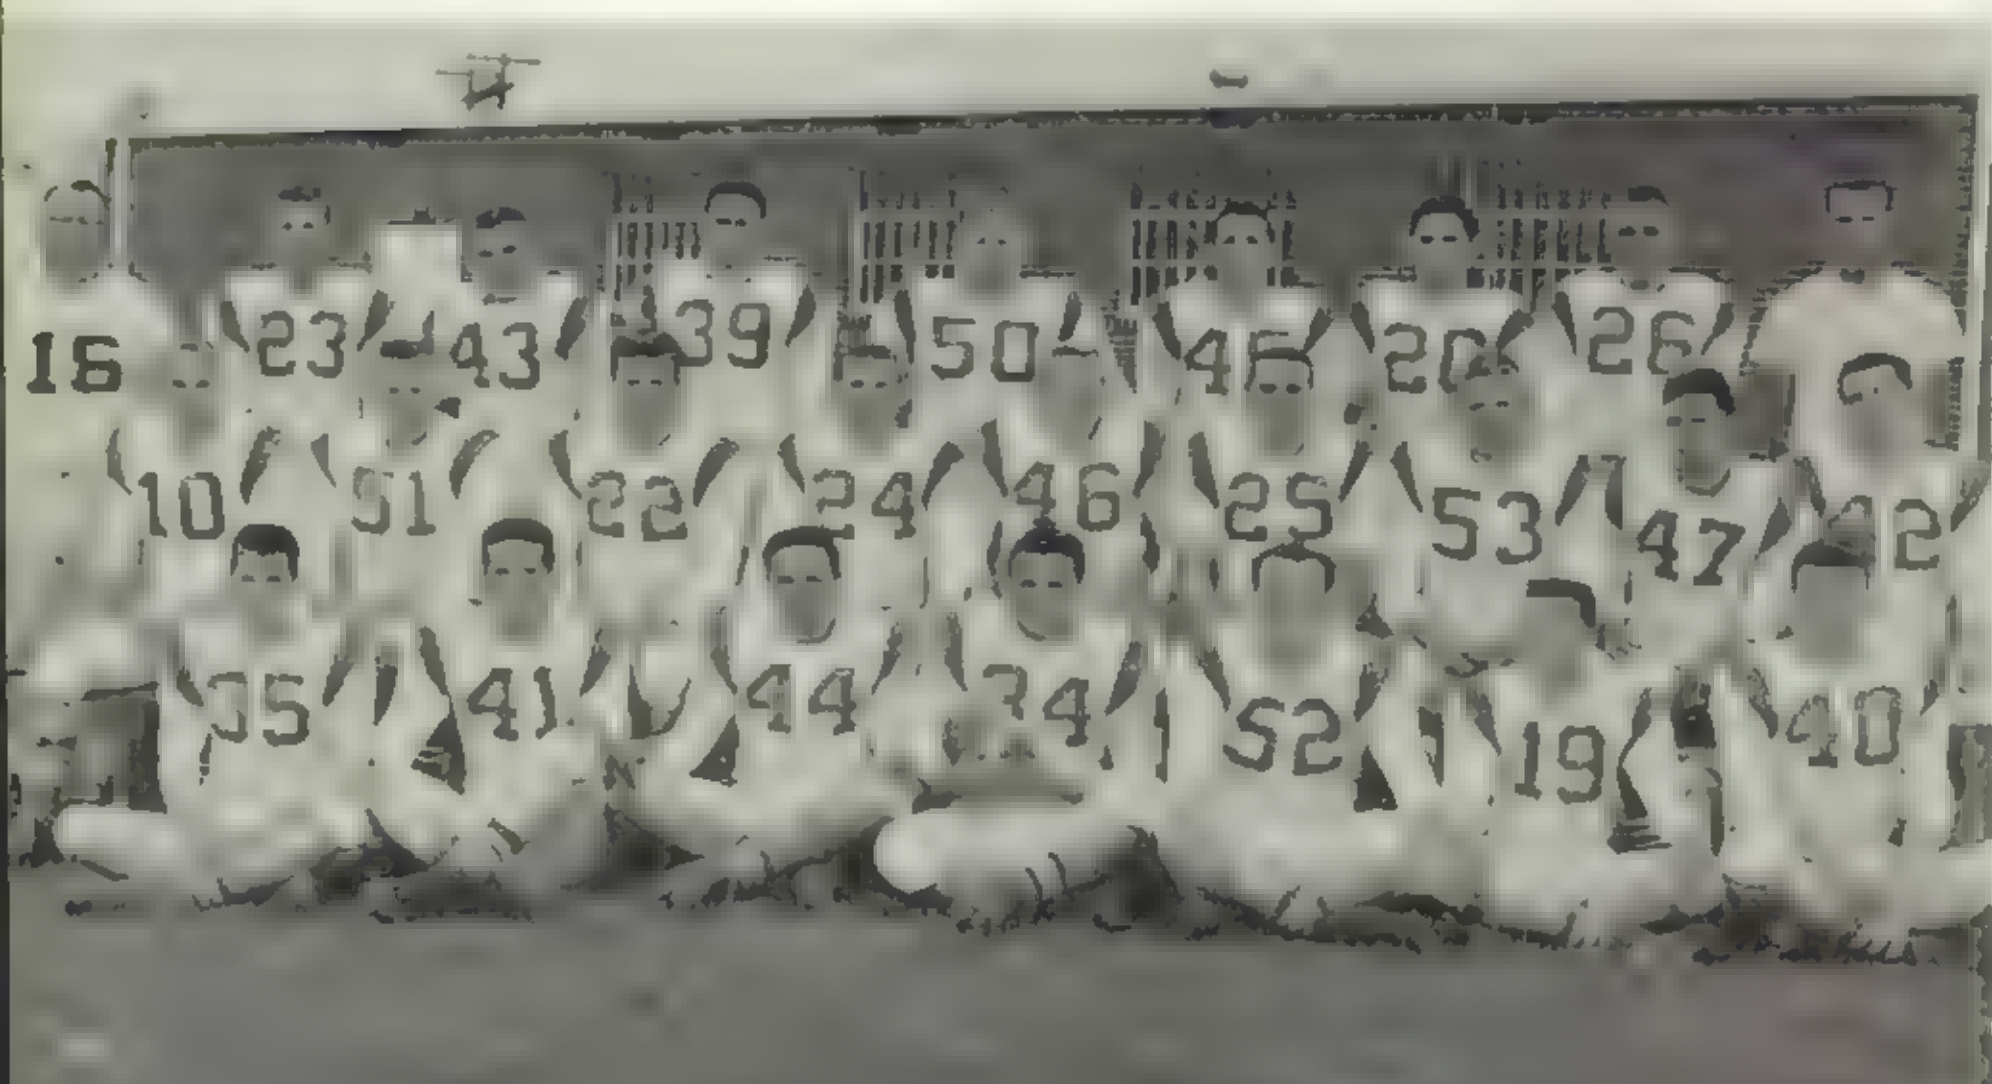

Despite the capable direction of Head Coach Cooke and Coach Trickey, the '59 Pilots suffered one of the worst seasons in their history. Two of the mainstays from the '58 squad—Duff Gillespie and Herb Williams—were unable to play during the entire season because of injuries sustained in the '58 campaign. Faced with a rebuilding program this year, the Pilots fought against inexperience to earn admiration of fans and opponents alike. The dogged determination of the Cairo line and the ground-gauging spirit of the Pilot backs frequently harassed the efforts of the opposing eleven and gave the fans something to cheer about. Although the Pilots were winless in ten outings, they gave Metropolis and Caruthersville a real scare, and in every game, they expended an all-out effort for victory.

A LAST-SECOND LUNGE brings Darrow down within yards of the goal.

In the first game, Pilot hopes were shattered early, as the Cape Tigers jumped off to a big lead and never relinquished it. The final score was a nightmarish 52-7. The next game was almost a carbon copy of the first, as the Sikeston Bulldogs, the perennial champions of the conference, mauled the Pilots by the score of 52-7.

After four straight defeats by large majorities, the Metropolis Trojans stormed onto Schultz Field to face a determined Cairo team. Going into the fourth quarter, the Trojans held a three-touchdown edge, but the battling Pilots rallied in the final stanza for two touchdowns and really gave the shell-shocked Trojans a scare before bowing 26-20.

In the second half of the season, the Cairo Pilots improved greatly. Although the win column was just as bare at the end of the season as it was at the first, the team's desire to win had led the way to many exciting moments.

LOYAL CHEERLEADERS FOLLOW TEAM, BOOST SCHOOL SPIRIT

Working out new cheers, presenting novel skits at pep assemblies, or keeping the school spirit at its peak, the cheerleaders were always on their toes. With that familiar "On to Victory" and "Go Get 'em, Pilots" at the end of each rally, everyone was ready for the night's game. Neither weather nor slippery hardwood interfered with their zealous vells.

With blankets, thermos jugs, and food galore, they looked like newly grub-staked miners setting off to find the Mother Lode. Though they certainly were not miners, they hit the richest vein of all—the experiences that make a school career rich in memories. The cheerleaders—that jelly-roll gang with pockets full of Sugar Daddies—will long remember arriving at games late, leaving car coats in restaurants, waiting an hour for a train, getting sick from an overdose of pop corn, and studying in cars by flashlights held in their mouths.

BASKETBALL SEASON

The Pilots had a rough season on the hardwood, winning 10 and losing 15. The season was not without highlights, though, for the Pilot five shined in two tournaments. In the Crab Orchard Tournament the Cairo team routed a Cartersville team 76-56, then lost to the eventual winner, University High of Carbondale, by the score of 48-44. In the consolation game, the Pilots trounced Royalton 64-61 to capture third place in the tourney.

At Mound City, the Pilots downed a tough Thebes team 58-17 and crashed through the Alto Pass defenses to win 74-51, snaring a berth in the championship game against a high-scoring Mound City team. When the final buzzer had sounded, the Pilots had thwarted Mound City's efforts to turn the game into a rout and had almost pulled a startling upset before bowing 63-55.

Cairo's Jr. Varsity and Freshman teams had the makings of good ball clubs, giving the Cairo followers hopes for the coming years and throwing more light on Coach Ken Trickey's first campaign at Cairo High.

This year the C-Club, which is composed of athletes who have lettered in sports for Cairo High, was reorganized. The club has met with instant success and promises to grow in size and fame in future years.

Another new look was given to the Cairo basketball fans when a benefit game was held between a Cairo independent team and the Murray State freshmen. The purpose of the game was to furnish money for purchasing blazers for the varsity basketball squad to wear to out-of-town games. Enough money was raised, and the colorful blazers soon dotted the Cairo High landscape. Perhaps, in future years, more blazers will be purchased, and the entire C-Club will be sporting them.

DISCUSSING THE MERITS of weight training are Skip Graham, Howard Thomas, and Clifford Fields.

This year, the first time in several years, Cairo High athletes participated in a baseball program. Home games were played at the newly made diamond in St. Mary's Park. The Pilots, under the direction of Coach Cooke, had a well-balanced ball club, and the local fans supported them well at the games. And these fans were rewarded with heads-up action and good sportsmanship all the way. Highlights of the season included a come-from-behind victory over the Dongola Demons in which the Pilots overcame a four run deficit by scoring seven runs in the final inning. In another game, home fans were treated when the Pilots clobbered the Mounds Railroaders 12 to 4. Going into the District Tournament, hopes were high, but these were soon dispersed as the Pilots suffered a jarring 18 to 0 setback to the Mound City Tigers. In spite of this ending, the season was successful; and with most of the players returning, next year's team should prove to be tough to beat.

Cairo High's cindermen fared badly during the '60 season, as they played against larger and more experienced teams. In their first meet, Metropolis turned back the Pilots with considerable ease, although the Pilots did have some bright spots. In the second meet, against Cape Girardeau, the Cairo athletes did much better, and almost pulled the meet out of the fire before dropping a close decision.

The Pilots entered a portion of the team in the Big Eight Conference meet. They finished fifth, with Dillingham scoring all the Cairo points. With this meet, the Pilots closed the 1960 season, and the pounding of running feet, along with the scraping of spiked shoes, faded from the cinders of Schultz Field for another year.

IN ACTIVITIES

As members of Cairo High's classes and clubs we spent a busy year piling up memories—surviving GAA initiation . . . winding through the streets during the Snake Dance . . . working on Homecoming floats in the rain . . . singing in the chorus in the Christmas assembly . . . practicing for the Music Contest . . . making Kleenex peonies for the Senior Play . . . borrowing pistols for the Junior Play . . . admiring Quill and Scroll pins after initiation . . . dancing dreamily at the High Society Ball. These were the special events that made our year complete

STUDENT COUNCIL WRITES FIRST HANDBOOK

Our Student Council set the pace for activities at Cairo High. From September to May, the twenty members, who were elected in the fall from the four classes and eligible clubs, together with their sponsor Miss Fitts, kept busy working on the council's many projects. This industrious group took tickets at the games, sponsored School Spirit Day and the Athletic Banquet, supervised Homecoming activities, and worried about the finances for the Spring Formal. A new project of this year's council was the publication of an informative handbook for incoming freshmen.

Despite long hours and a few minor frustrations, the members enjoyed their work and were proud of the results.

HEELS LOOK NICE, BUT OH! Emily Ochler and Martha Ellen Proffert take a break at the tea.

On April 7, against a background of white flowers and lighted tapers, seven seniors and four juniors were inducted into the National Honor Society—the highest honor bestowed upon Cairo High students. The new members made the pledge, were presented with the torches and pins by the '59 members, and were then congratulated by friends and relatives.

Following the initiation, the members and their guests were invited by Mrs. Schaefer, the sponsor, to a tea given in their honor in the Home Economics room.

In order to be eligible for membership in the National Honor Society, a student must have maintained an average of 90 throughout high school. Then from the potential candidates, 15% of the senior class and 5% of the junior class are selected by their classmates and faculty on the basis of their leadership, service, and character—the four ideals of the Society.

Composed of both Latin and French students, and sponsored by Miss Crozier, the Language Club is a member of the Junior Classical Society. Each year the club is well represented at the state convention of the JCS. However, this year the convention was held in Ottawa and for the first time in five years, Cairo was unable to attend. In April the club presented an assembly. Robby Milford took Cairo High students on a trip to Rome, where they were guests at the Roman wedding of Cassius and Julia. Then they journeyed to Paris to visit Docteur DuPont.

FHA INITIATES SWEETHEART BALL, CROWNS ROYAL PAIR

The Future Homemakers of America, one of the largest clubs at Cairo High, had a busy and successful year. Under the capable guidance of Mrs. Owsley, their sponsor, the members attended meetings, had delicatessens, worked on chapter projects, and earned junior degrees.

FHA activities filled the school calendar. Included in the list of projects were the formal installation in October, the sock hop in November, and a Christmas Tea for the faculty in December. The outstanding project of the year—the Sweetheart Dance—was held on February 11. Preparations for the affair were begun weeks in advance, including the election of the king and queen by the student body. Tommy Miller and Bonnie Fischer were crowned Sweetheart King and Queen.

Saws buzzed, hammers banged, and the Industrial Arts Club ended another successful year. Twice a month the members met with their sponsors, Mr. Qualls and Mr. Salmon. The purpose of the club is to help the boys develop skill by working on extra projects—making bedroom suites, bookcases, chests, and other useful items. As is the custom, the Industrial Arts Club made the stage setting for the plays.

This year, with a clever idea and much cooperation, the club worked its way to first prize in the Homecoming parade. Another project was the annual trip to the St. Louis industrial area, planned for March 11. However, because of the unusually bad weather the tour had to be cancelled.

TEEN-AGE SCIENTISTS LEARN "WHY" IN PHYSICS CLUB

Things weren't always predictable at the Physics Club meetings. Plans often "backfired" and created minor catastrophes. At the bi-monthly meetings the twenty-five members viewed films, conducted experiments, and usually ended in a "not so technical" gab session. Mr. Chaney, the sponsor, added to the interest of the meetings with his bits of wisdom.

Members learned that cooperation is enjoyable. They spent hours working on their Homecoming float, which was awarded second prize. In March a committee of boys and girls designed and built the patio fountain, background for the Senior Spaghetti Supper.

Several students made amateur radios, televisions, and hi-fi sets. Although they looked rather crude, they worked, which spells success in any language.

No longer was physics remote—it pertained to everyday life. Even long hours spent over homework problems presented challenges and made science students aware that we are living in the midst of physics problems.

OUR INGENIOUS SCIENCE STUDENT, Hugh Spence, demonstrates to the Physics Club, the transmitting of alternating current through the human body.

The Girls' Athletic Association, one of our most active groups, had another "bang-up" year. Several afternoons a week, members enjoyed participating in athletic games. Whether stealing an extra base, clacking hockey sticks in a bully, bowling in the downstairs hall, or shooting a tie-breaking basket, competition was keen, but always friendly and sportsmanlike.

With the help of their sponsor, Miss Crawford, the girls had big projects, too. Initiating new members . . . traveling to Play Days . . . entertaining mothers . . . putting on a floor show for the sock hop . . . going to St. Louis to shop and see the Ice Capades . . . camping out at Giant City—these are the G.A.A. memories of 1960.

HALLELUJAH! It's all over," cried the flour-sprinkled freshmen at the GAA initiation

AMATEUR TEACHERS from the Leadership Class instruct grade school children in kickball.

"Give service and help others" is the motto of the Leadership Class. First organized in 1957 under the sponsorship of Miss Crawford, the class now has thirty-two members, twice the original number.

The class met every Tuesday at noon. Faithful mothers and breathless little sisters often delivered hot meals to waiting girls, while others withdrew sandwiches stored in their lockers. The lunches devoured, the class participated in lively panel discussions on honesty, enthusiasm, loyalty, and sportsmanship.

The year's activities included refereeing the Girls' Basketball Tournament, teaching games to grade school children, and joining the G.A.A. in a week-end trip to Giant City.

PEP CLUB PROMOTES SCHOOL SPIRIT, SPORTS NEW HATS

"We're with you, boys . . ." Pilot supporters—the Co-Pilots, Marching Pep Club, and the Major-ettes—lived up to this yell. Through cheering, marching, and twirling, these organizations promoted school spirit.

With the support of Mr. Mescher and Miss Crawford, the Co-Pilots were re-organized and more active. Members sported hats of blue and white at games and, after basketball season, enjoyed a special banquet held for the active members.

The Marching Pep Club and Majorettes under the direction of Margaret Berbling Bagby performed many snappy, complicated routines before enthusiastic fans.

Members of these organizations remember practice sessions with cheerleaders . . . fun on buses going to games . . . hours of marching up and down cold gyms trying to remember to pivot on 5-6 . . . twirling in the rain when the batons were as "slippery as eels" . . . and the feeling that it was worth it all when the game was won.

STUDENTS PUBLISH PAPER

The familiar announcement, "Pilot Light Staff, meet in typing room after school," is a reminder of the work which goes into the making of our school newspaper, The Pilot Light. Since Cairo High does not offer journalism, the work must be done after school. Frequently, as the deadline approaches, the editors, staff, and Mrs. Bell, the sponsor, can be found in the typing room long after five gathering material for copy, using the duplicator, and stapling the pages of our monthly paper together.

Along with the favorites of last year—the Yellow Beadle, humorous anecdotes, and the "Introducing . . ." column—a new feature, the Theme of the Month makes the Pilot Light popular with the students.

The Egypti Staff, composed of seventeen seniors and four juniors, poured long hours of work into the 1960 yearbook—planning and financing it. Early in the year, the co-editors and the sponsor, Miss Greaney, attended an Illinois State High School Press Association convention at the University of Illinois. Besides bringing back a great deal of information, they also returned with the announcement that the Egypti had been elected first vice-president of the organization.

Staff members recall drawing layout, selling ads, delivering carnations, struggling over copy, and racing with deadlines. Relaxing at the luncheon on Graduation Day, the members celebrated the shipment of the final copy.

Club meetings were fun, and we enjoyed relaxing at informal gatherings, girls in the new knee-length dresses and spool heels, boys in plaid sport coats. We remember, too, hours of preparing for big events—practicing and presenting the cheerleader's shotgun wedding, Egypti's TV show, Student Council's western, Language Club's European tour. Initiations and installations were another part of our social year, but more important were the dances—the Enchanted Woodland with elves . . . the Refresher Dance after semesters . . . the Sweetheart Ball near Valentine's Day . . . Loyalty Day at Teen-Town . . . the sophisticated ballroom of Spring Formal. In bermudas or in formals, we were ready to go when we heard favorites such as "Running Bear" or "Theme from a Summer Place."

OUR DANCES, MELLOW AND DREAMY

THE CANCAN DANCERS — Susan Haslauer, Marianne Walder, Karen Currier, and Carson Rodgers—entertained the student body at the French portion of the Language Club Assembly. One dainty French miss fell on her cancan.

"AW THERE'S OTHER FISH IN THE SEA," Agnes (Kay Riddle) advises Cindy (Sue Lewis).

One of the most crucial times of a teen-age girl's life is prom-time. It's especially crucial if the girl doesn't have a date. The situation in the senior play, "Strictly Formal," was even further complicated by a visit from a pretty cousin who lived in the city. In no time at all Marcia had a date to the Prom with practically every boy in town.

The hometown girls tried every trick imaginable to win their boy friends and dates back. The problem was finally solved by Cindy, a relative from Deucyville, and her tuba. The action ended with a date for everyone and all complications removed.

The audience was kept laughing, and some of the girls became quite "red-faced" when they saw revealed their secret tactics for getting a date.

The junior play, "Dear Phoebe," combined comedy and murder to make successful drama. Phoebe Goodheart, the lovelorn columnist for the DAILY STAR, retires and leaves a place that is hard to fill—that is, until Bill Hastings appears. Bill, a young college professor soon finds himself dubbed "Phoebe Goodheart— counselor in matters of the heart."

Aunt Phoebe's real identity is unrevealed to the public and Bill must disguise himself (with a wig and a dress) when the eccentric old owner of the newspaper visits. When the DAILY STAR learns of a sports scandal, complete chaos results as all of the reporters try to break the story. The murder of Rochelle Mignonne, a chantoosey, finally exposes the racket and provides a promotion for "Aunt Phoebe."

With the fall of the curtain, juniors breathed a sigh of relief, but remembered the fun which had gone with the hours of practice.

"GENTLE AUNT PHOEBE" (Bob Bland) succeeds in overpowering Rocky, the football hero (Bill Vaughn).

STUDENTS CARRY ON . . .

On the eve of our 1959 Homecoming, students gathered at Schultz Field for the traditional snake dance and bonfire, where the "Kennett Indians" were burned at stake.

The following morning, October 23, the annual pre-parade rush began. Students in working clothes, hindered by the windy, rainy day, gathered behind the school, in nearby basements, garages, and in other "out of the weather" places to assemble their floats. Amid gales of laughter, screams of fear, and shouts of anxiety, they worked to perfect them by parade time.

From the many clever floats entered, first place went to the Industrial Arts Club, second to the Physics Club, and third to the Language Club.

That night the Kennett game, the dance, and the coronation climaxed a memorable Homecoming.

ALWAYS FAITHFUL PILOTS are lauded with orchids from the Language Club. Their unusual corsage received third place.

LONG ARMS of Seniors' octopus entangle Indian maiden, Marilee Reed. In the right background, students add finishing touches to their prize winning Physics float.

CROWN BEARER, Greg Mescher, and flower girls, Bunny Bryant and Ginny Lou Prohlet are amused by Bennie Darrows' pre-coronation charm.

After the Homecoming game, the crowd proceeded to the gym, decorated as an Enchanted Woodland, complete with an impish elf.

The highlight of the evening was the Queen's coronation. As the band began to play, "A Pretty Girl is Like A Melody," all heads turned toward the entrance. The nine lovely candidates, nominated by the football squad and elected by the student body, started their promenade through the archway of autumn trees, to the platform. After the court had taken its place, spectators and royalty looked on as Miss Nancy Clutts entered and was crowned our 1959-60 Homecoming Queen.

Following the coronation, couples dancing to dreamy music made the evening complete.

WITH OUR FRIENDS

The equation, the participle, and the Preamble may be forgotten, but we will never forget our friends. We'll picture puzzled freshmen on their first day in high school . . . the boy in the next chair drawing rockets . . . breathless late-comers with their invalid admits . . . the student body raising the rafters at pep assemblies . . . familiar pairs strolling down the corridors . . . tassels and tears blinding seniors on graduation.

SENIOR OFFICERS—President Don Steele, Vice-President Sue Lewis, Secretary Marilyn Reed, and Treasurer J. D. Lowe—mail applications to favorite universities.

MEMBERS OF CLASS OF '60 PREPARE FOR THE FUTURE,

September brought the return of seventy-six seniors all determined to leave a good scholastic record and to fill the year with fun.

As the year progressed, the class stepped ahead by having the most students on the honor roll as well as by taking college boards, writing research papers, and successfully passing such subjects as physics and advanced math.

Besides being on top scholastically, the class, sponsored by Miss Crozier, worked hard on outside activities as they prepared for the trip to New Orleans. They earned money by selling magazines and Christmas cards, feeding patrons spaghetti, and giving a wonderful performance in "Strictly Formal."

Then came graduation. Everywhere tears overcame brave smiles, and goodbyes were said as seniors removed their caps and gowns.

"WONDERFUL—wish it could last," sing these seniors grouped around their favorite pianist, Miss Crozier.

WHO SAID girls and boys like to watch TV? Not at all! Katherine Russell, Debra Ham and Donald Davidson settle back to watch.

On Wednesday, April 13, seventy-two eager seniors and their sponsors boarded two buses and headed for New Orleans.

The six days of the trip provided many memories . . . Mooney and Bill, the bus drivers . . . the historical cemetery at Vicksburg . . . New Orleans' famous French quarter . . . "swingin' Dixieland" music . . . good food at the Blue Room and The Court of Two Sisters . . . a harbor trip . . . singing by a campfire . . . Easter sunrise services . . . mottled bayous . . . beautiful gardens . . . a peaceful Mobile night.

Like "the hunter home from the hill" came the adventure-seeking senior class—sorry to end the adventure, but glad to be home and to have New Orleans' memories.

AMBITIOUS JUNIORS AWAIT LEADERSHIP IN '61 . . .

The juniors, sponsored by Mrs. Royer, had a successful year, both academically and socially.

Twenty elected physics, and nineteen chose Algebra II and solid geometry. All juniors studied the required subjects, American History and English. Being interested in possible scholarships, sixteen took the National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test in March, and in May several drove to Paducah, Kentucky, to take College Boards.

The juniors were cooperative, selling many tickets to their play, operating the refreshment stand at one of the basketball games, and helping the seniors with the Spaghetti Supper.

Following the Cairo High School tradition, the juniors decorated the stage beautifully for baccalaureate services and commencement exercises—a last tribute to the senior class of 1960.

WASTING NO TIME in study hall, Charlene Berbling "bones up" for a French test.

HELP SENIORS, END YEAR ACCEPTING HONORS

GIRLS' STATE REPRESENTATIVE, Martha Ellen Protiet, and Boys' State Representative, Don Full, discuss plans for departure while waiting on Mr. Mescher.

FOLLOWING TRADITION, the juniors decorated the stage for graduation. Phyllis Thomas, Bill Vaughn, and Pat Diggs are setting off a reserved section.

TWO DOWN, TWO TO GO—SOPHOMORES NEAR THEIR GOAL

In the fall of 1959, eighty-six ex-freshmen gained a new name—sophomores. Determination, ingenuity, and hard work drove them through an active year. They chalked up points by overcoming the problems of a rainy Homecoming—moving their float to Warden's Garage—and holding it together during the parade.

Sponsored by Miss Conant, they came in second in the Magazine Drive; sold tickets to their sixth annual Gospel Sing, which featured the Blackwood Brothers from Harrisburg, Illinois; participated in Spirit Day; collected dues (25 cents a month); and assisted the seniors by being "runners" the night of the Spaghetti Supper.

The sophomores took part in the school's many clubs and activities. They belonged to the Pep Club, F.H.A., G.A.A., the Language Club, and others. There were sophomore boys on the basketball and football teams, and sophomore girls were among the cheerleaders.

Although many extracurricular activities kept the sophomores busy, most of them found time to maintain high scholastic averages.

FRESHMEN FIND THEIR PLACE

Unabashed by many new faces, longer class periods, and confusing programs, the freshmen faced high school with confidence. Quickly they settled down to both the joys and the trials of math, general science, English, and their electives. In general science the students learned many new and fascinating things about the human body from the life size manikin.

Under the able sponsorship of Miss Mitchell, they entered into the many activities with enthusiasm. On Spirit Day they received first place trophy for their skit, The History of Cairo High School, along with third place for their school song. At Christmas time the freshmen contributed over one hundred cans of food to the Salvation Army. During the sports season they promptly volunteered to work in the concession stands. Looking forward to their senior year, freshmen got a small taste of the excitement and work ahead of them when they offered the seniors a helping hand with the Spaghetti Supper.

books stacked and counted, lockers emptied, school is out. The year is over, but not ended, for it will never be forgotten. The experiences we shared will live in our memories long after the sound of the last bell fades away, and we can always look back and fondly recall 1960. THE WAY
WE SEE IT.

THANKS MERCHANTS OF CAIRO, for your many services which made 1960 a pleasant and successful year for us—advertising in our yearbook . . . lending trucks for the Homecoming Parade . . . wiring for that just right shade of wallpaper for Spring Formal . . . taking time to give information for economics reports.

A special thanks, also, to the others who helped make this yearbook possible—Taylor Publishing Company, our publishers; the S. K. Smith Company, who made our covers; and Spieth Studio and James Wissinger, our photographers.
